Moroccan Handmade Furniture Brand — SEO & Content Plan

2026-09-17 · @Someone

Executive Summary

This plan launches a new handmade Moroccan furniture/design brand into the niche led by La Marrakechoise — sculptural, artisan-signed furniture in travertine, solid wood, and hammered metal, positioned above generic "Moroccan decor" importers on design and story, not just price. Since there's no site yet, this doc assumes: (1) English-language content targeting US/UK/EU design-conscious buyers first — the same market already reached through the brass faucet business — with a French version added later if EU demand justifies it (La Marrakechoise itself is French-first); (2) a placeholder brand name used throughout (swap in the real name before publishing). Flagged in a comment on this doc — confirm or correct both before content goes live.

Four players currently occupy this niche: La Marrakechoise (closest direct model — artisan-signature, travertine/wood, sur-mesure, print catalog), Mogador Design (near-identical positioning — sculptural travertine/marble pieces, thinner content), Justmorocco (broad US-based importer of vintage + new ornate Moroccan furniture, much higher average price, different aesthetic), and Moroccan Interior (decor/fixtures rather than furniture, but the strongest active blog of the four). None of the four combines La Marrakechoise's design-forward positioning with strong English-language SEO/GEO content — that gap is the opening.

Target: Home, two flagship category pages (Seating, Tables & Consoles), About, Sur-Mesure, and Contact live within 30 days; full category set, 10-post blog, and schema markup within 90 days.

Niche & Competitive Audit

Site	Positioning & materials	Price range	E-E-A-T signals	Content depth	Biggest gap
lamarrakechoise.com	Design-authored furniture: travertine, solid wood, hand-hammered metal; explicit "signature d'auteur" positioning	~~1,600–25,900 MAD~~ ($160–$2,600)	Named founder/art director with a first-person quote, named artisan trades (menuisiers, tailleurs de pierre, dinandiers), workshop process detail	Home, 180-page catalog (web + PDF), sur-mesure page, showroom w/ address & hours, no visible blog	No blog; French-first (FR/ES/EN/AR toggle exists but EN content likely thin) — open lane for an English-first SEO/GEO play
mogadordesign.com	Sculptural furniture in marble, travertine, rare wood, traditional stone	Barstool $375, floor lamp from $159 (accessible entry price vs. La Marrakechoise)	Generic "we create" copy, no named founder/artisans	Thin — one product gallery page, no About/blog/story depth found	Closest aesthetic competitor but weakest content — easiest to out-rank on informational + brand-story terms
justmorocco.com	Broad vintage + new Moroccan furniture importer: bone-inlay, mother-of-pearl, carved wood, US-based	$1,800–$19,500+ (much higher, ornate/traditional rather than minimal-sculptural)	"Top importers" claim, US-based warehouse implied, no named craftsman story	Category breadth, no blog found, product-listing style content	Ornate/traditional aesthetic, not a direct design-positioning competitor — useful for price-anchoring, not a content model to copy
moroccaninterior.com	Decor & fixtures (copper, leather, brass) rather than furniture; "fair trade" and cooperative-partnership story	Mid-range, not fully listed	Fair-trade/cooperative narrative, active journal with dated posts	Best blog of the four (dated posts, specific topics like oxidized copper care)	Not a furniture competitor, but the benchmark to beat on blog cadence and specificity

What this means: the design-forward, higher-price niche (La Marrakechoise, Mogador Design) has strong visual/craft storytelling but no real blog and limited English SEO surface area. The decor-adjacent player (Moroccan Interior) shows what a working content engine looks like but isn't fighting for the same furniture keywords. A new brand that combines La Marrakechoise-level design story with Moroccan Interior-level content cadence, in English, has clear room to lead both classic SEO and AI-answer citations for "Moroccan designer furniture" queries.

Keyword & Topic Strategy (SEO + GEO)

Same rule as any GEO-aware page: a direct 40-60 word answer at the top before the brand story, because both RAG tools (Google AI Mode, Perplexity) and training-data citation (ChatGPT) reward content that answers the query in the first few sentences.

Page	Primary keyword	Secondary keywords	Search intent
Home	handmade Moroccan furniture	Moroccan designer furniture, travertine furniture Morocco	Brand + category discovery
Seating	Moroccan travertine stool / handmade Moroccan chair	sculptural stool, artisan bench Morocco	Category / commercial
Tables & Consoles	Moroccan travertine table	handmade console table Morocco, solid wood console Marrakech	Category / commercial
About	Marrakech furniture workshop	Moroccan artisan furniture maker	Trust / E-E-A-T
Sur-Mesure / Custom	custom Moroccan furniture	bespoke travertine furniture	Transactional / high intent
Blog (pillar)	Moroccan furniture materials guide	travertine vs. marble furniture, how is Moroccan furniture made	Informational — top of funnel
Contact / Showroom	Marrakech furniture showroom	Sidi Ghanem furniture atelier	Local / trust

GEO-specific structure rules for every page:

- Open with the direct answer (40-60 words), then expand into material, process, and story.
- Question-phrased H2/H3s matching how people ask AI ("Is travertine furniture durable?" not "About Travertine").
- FAQ block (6-10 Q&As, 50-150 words each) with FAQPage schema on every category and blog page — none of the four competitors reviewed use this consistently.
- Specific claims over vague ones: "hand-finished over 3-6 weeks by a team of 4 artisans" beats "crafted with care and passion."

- Comparison content ("travertine vs. marble furniture," "Moroccan vs. Scandinavian design furniture") — none of the four have this, and ChatGPT in particular over-indexes on comparison pages when answering shopping questions.

Site Structure / Sitemap

```
flowchart TD
  Home --> Seating
  Home --> TablesConsoles[Tables & Consoles]
  Home --> Lighting
  Home --> Mirrors
  Home --> Decor
  Home --> SurMesure[Sur-Mesure / Custom]
  Home --> About
  Home --> Blog
  Home --> Contact[Contact / Showroom]
  Seating --> SProd[Seating product pages]
  TablesConsoles --> TProd[Tables & Consoles product pages]
  Blog --> Post1[Materials & care guides]
  Blog --> Post2[Buying & style guides]
  Blog --> Post3[Craft & process stories]
```

Five category pages mirror La Marrakechoise's own catalog structure (Seating, Tables & Consoles, Lighting, Mirrors, Decor) so the sitemap matches how buyers already browse this niche. This plan writes full briefs for the two highest-intent categories first (Seating; Tables & Consoles) — the remaining three follow the same template. Every category and blog post links back to Home and to Sur-Mesure (the highest-margin, highest-intent page). Add breadcrumb schema (Home > Category > Product) site-wide.

Home Page — Content Brief & Draft

Meta title (58 chars): Handmade Moroccan Furniture in Travertine & Wood | [Brand]

Meta description (150 chars): Sculptural furniture hand-made in a Marrakech workshop — travertine, solid wood, and hammered metal. Custom sizing available. Ships worldwide.

H1: Handmade Moroccan Furniture, Shaped by Hand in Marrakech

Full draft (~1,200 words)

[Brand] makes sculptural furniture and objects hand-shaped in a workshop in Marrakech, Morocco — travertine tables and consoles, solid-wood seating, and hand-hammered metal fixtures, each designed as a single, signed piece rather than a mass-produced SKU.

Every piece is made to order in the workshop, not pulled from a warehouse shelf.

Why handmade Moroccan furniture

Moroccan furniture-making is a centuries-old craft built around specific trades — carpenters (menuisiers) who shape solid wood by hand, stone-cutters (tailleurs de pierre) who work travertine and marble block by block, and metalworkers (dinandiers) who hammer brass and iron into fixtures. A piece that passes through these hands carries small, deliberate variations — a slightly different hammer mark, a grain pattern unique to that block of stone — that a factory-molded piece cannot reproduce. That variation isn't a flaw to hide; it's the reason to choose a handmade piece over a mass-produced one.

Most furniture sold as "Moroccan style" today is manufactured overseas from a catalog template and shipped in volume. [Brand]'s pieces are designed first as a sketch, refined with the artisan who will make it, and produced only after the design and the material agree — the same discipline used by design-led studios, applied to a Moroccan workshop.

Materials that age well

Travertine is a natural stone quarried in Morocco, valued for its warm, layered texture and its durability — unlike engineered stone or laminate, it doesn't chip down to a different-colored core, because the color and texture run through the whole block. Solid wood pieces use local hardwoods finished by hand rather than veneered composite, so a scratch can be sanded and refinished rather than replaced. Hand-hammered brass and metal fixtures develop a living patina with use, the same way solid brass does in any handmade metal object — a change that most buyers in this category actively want, not a defect to avoid.

What's in the collection

Seating — stools, benches, and chairs in travertine, solid wood, and upholstered forms, sized for both statement pieces and everyday use.

Tables & Consoles — dining tables, side tables, and console tables combining stone tops with wood or metal bases, built to be a room's focal point rather than a backdrop piece.

Lighting, Mirrors & Decor — hand-finished lighting, mirrors with natural stone or hammered-metal frames, and smaller decor objects made in the same workshop and finishes as the furniture, for buyers furnishing a full room rather than one piece.

Every category is designed to work as a coherent set — the same stone, wood tone, and metal finish carried across furniture, lighting, and decor — so a room can be furnished piece by piece without finishes clashing later.

Made to order, made to fit your space

Because each piece is hand-made rather than warehouse-stocked, dimensions, stone color, and wood finish can be adjusted to fit a specific room — see the Sur-Mesure (custom) page to start a made-to-order piece directly with the workshop. Standard collection pieces ship globally, with production and shipping timelines noted on each product page since nothing here is made in advance of an order.

Visiting the workshop

The workshop and showroom are based in Marrakech and open to visitors by appointment — see the Contact page for the address, hours, and how to book a visit. For buyers who can't visit in person, the full collection and a downloadable catalog are available to browse online.

Explore Seating · Explore Tables & Consoles · Start a Custom Order

---

Word count: ~780 in the sections above; expand "Materials that age well" and "What's in the collection" with 2-3 more paragraphs each (real product photos, a materials comparison table, specific finish names) to reach 1,200 — left as a placeholder since that expansion needs the real brand name, real product line, and real workshop details rather than invented specifics.

Seating Category Page — Content Brief & Draft

Meta title: Handmade Moroccan Seating — Travertine & Wood Stools, Benches, Chairs
Meta description: Sculptural stools, benches, and chairs hand-shaped in travertine and solid wood in a Marrakech workshop. Made to order, ships worldwide.

Direct-answer opening (40-60 words): Handmade Moroccan seating includes travertine stools, solid-wood benches, and upholstered chairs shaped by hand in a Marrakech workshop. Each piece is made to order rather than mass-produced, and stone or wood pieces are cut and finished individually, so texture and grain vary slightly from piece to piece.

Body sections (H3, question-phrased):

- Is travertine comfortable and durable enough for everyday seating? — direct answer: yes for stools and benches used indoors; note weight, and that stone seating suits accent/statement use more than daily dining-chair use, which is where wood or upholstered pieces fit better.
- Travertine stool vs. solid-wood stool — which to choose? — short comparison (weight, indoor/outdoor use, price, finish maintenance).

- Can seating be made to match an existing table or console? — direct answer pointing to the Sur-Mesure page for finish-matching requests.
- How much does a custom bench or stool cost? — give a real starting price range once pricing is set; specific numbers outperform "contact us for pricing" for both SEO and GEO.

FAQ block (schema-marked, 6 Q&As): Is travertine seating heavy to move? / Can travertine stools be used outdoors? / How is solid wood seating finished? / What's the lead time on a seating order? / Can I order matching sets? / Do you ship seating internationally?

Internal links: to Tables & Consoles (matching-set messaging), to Sur-Mesure, and to a future blog post on travertine vs. wood furniture care.

Tables & Consoles Category Page — Content Brief & Draft

Meta title: Handmade Moroccan Tables & Consoles — Travertine & Wood Meta description: Dining tables, side tables, and console tables combining travertine, solid wood, and hammered metal — hand-made in Marrakech. Custom sizing available.

Direct-answer opening (40-60 words): Handmade Moroccan tables and consoles combine natural travertine stone with solid wood or hand-hammered metal bases, made to order in a Marrakech workshop. The range covers dining tables, side tables, and console tables, each built as a single designed piece rather than a factory template.

Body sections (H3, question-phrased):

- Is travertine a good material for a dining or console table top? — direct answer on durability, heat resistance, and sealing/maintenance needs for a stone tabletop.
- Console table vs. side table — what's the difference and which do I need? — practical sizing/placement guidance, since this is a common pre-purchase search.
- Can a table be made in a custom size or stone color? — direct answer pointing to Sur-Mesure, with a realistic lead-time range.
- Do travertine table tops need sealing? — direct, factual answer (most travertine benefits from periodic sealing to resist staining) — the kind of specific, checkable claim that both search engines and AI answer engines reward.

FAQ block (schema-marked, 6 Q&As): Will a travertine table stain? / How heavy is a travertine console table? / Can I get a matching table and bench set? / What wood species are used for table bases? / What's the lead time on a custom table? / Do you ship large furniture internationally, and what does it cost?

Internal links: to Seating (matching-set messaging), to Sur-Mesure, and to About (workshop/materials sourcing).

About Page — Content Brief & Draft (E-E-A-T)

La Marrakechoise already does this well (a named founder with a first-person quote, named artisan trades) — so matching that bar, in English, with equally specific detail, is table stakes here rather than a unique advantage. The differentiation is doing it with more searchable specificity than any of the four competitors currently show in English.

What to include (fill with real names/details — flagged as placeholder):

- Experience: Name the founder or lead designer, years working with Moroccan artisans, and where the workshop is based (confirm actual neighborhood, e.g. Sidi Ghanem's design district or the medina). A first-person quote about the design process carries more weight than adjectives like "beautiful" or "authentic."
- Expertise: Walk through the actual process — how a piece moves from sketch to material selection to the stone-cutter, carpenter, or metalworker who shapes it — in enough technical detail to read as insider knowledge.
- Authoritativeness: State how many artisans work with the brand, how long the workshop has operated, and any press, gallery, or design-fair mentions if they exist.
- Trust: Include a real address (matching the Contact page), workshop photos or video, and an honest note on trade-offs (natural stone and wood vary piece to piece; lead times are longer than mass-produced furniture).

Direct-answer opening (40-60 words, GEO): [Brand] is a design studio and workshop in Marrakech, Morocco, making handmade furniture in travertine, solid wood, and hammered metal. [Founder/designer name] works directly with [N] Moroccan artisans — carpenters, stone-cutters, and metalworkers — to produce each piece to order, with no factory line and no reseller between the workshop and the customer.

Suggested H2s: Who designs and makes these pieces / From sketch to finished piece: how it's made / Why we work in travertine, wood, and hammered metal / Visit the workshop

Author/byline requirement: Add a named author bio (with a LinkedIn or Instagram link) to this page and every blog post — currently missing across all four competitors reviewed, and one of the most consistently cited E-E-A-T/GEO signals in current guidance.

Sur-Mesure (Custom Orders) Page — Content Brief & Draft

This is the highest-margin, highest-intent page in the plan — La Marrakechoise runs a WhatsApp-first custom quote flow ("first sketch arrives within 8 days"); matching that specific, verifiable promise is more persuasive than generic "contact us for custom work" copy, and specific timelines also perform better for GEO citation.

Meta title: Custom Moroccan Furniture, Made to Your Dimensions | [Brand] Meta description: Design a custom piece with our Marrakech workshop — your dimensions, stone, and finish. First sketch within [X] days.

Direct-answer opening (40-60 words): Custom furniture orders let a buyer specify dimensions, stone or wood finish, and design details for a piece made to order in the Marrakech workshop. The process starts with a written brief or reference image and typically produces a first sketch within [X] business days.

Body sections:

- How the custom process works — numbered steps: inquiry (photo/sketch/dimensions) → first design sketch → material and price confirmation → production → shipping. Mirror this as a short numbered list; numbered processes are pulled cleanly into AI answers and rich results.
- What can be customized — dimensions, stone color/type, wood species, metal finish, matching an existing piece.
- Timeline and pricing expectations — give real ranges once set (e.g., "custom tables typically take 6-10 weeks"); vague timelines undercut trust more than a longer real number would.

FAQ block (schema-marked, 5-6 Q&As): Is there a minimum order for custom pieces? / Can you match a piece I already own? / Do you ship custom furniture internationally? / What information do you need to start a quote? / Can I see a sketch before committing to production?

Conversion note: La Marrakechoise routes this entirely through WhatsApp — offering both WhatsApp and a form widens reach to buyers who prefer email, since not every international buyer uses WhatsApp.

Blog Strategy & First 10 Posts

Three pillars, targeting real search + AI-query patterns in this niche and directly out-covering Moroccan Interior's blog (currently the strongest of the four researched, but focused on decor/fixtures, not furniture).

Pillar 1 — Materials & care (informational, top-of-funnel, highest GEO value):

1. "Travertine vs. Marble Furniture: What's the Difference?"
2. "How to Care for a Travertine Table (Sealing, Cleaning, Stains)"
3. "Is Natural Stone Furniture Durable? What to Know Before You Buy"

Pillar 2 — Buying & style guides (commercial-investigation intent): 4. "How to Choose a Console Table Size for Your Room" 5. "Moroccan Design Furniture vs. Scandinavian Minimalism: Mixing Styles" 6. "Travertine Furniture vs. Wood Furniture: Which Fits Your Space?" 7. "How Much Does Custom Furniture Cost? A Realistic Guide"

Pillar 3 — Craft & process (E-E-A-T + differentiation competitors can't easily copy): 8. "Inside a Marrakech Furniture Workshop: From Sketch to Finished Piece" 9. "Meet the Artisans: The Carpenters, Stone-Cutters, and Metalworkers Behind [Brand]" (named profiles — reinforces the About page) 10. "Why Every Piece Is Made to Order (And Why That Means a Wait)"

Each post: 800-1,500 words, direct answer in the first 100 words, question-phrased H2s, 4-6 FAQ items with schema, one internal link to a category/product page, one to About or Sur-Mesure, a named author byline. Cadence: 1/week for the first 10 weeks, then 2/month ongoing. Refresh stats and "last updated" dates quarterly.

Contact / Showroom Page — Content Brief & Draft

Meta title: Visit Our Marrakech Showroom | [Brand] Contact Meta description: Visit the [Brand] workshop and showroom in Marrakech by appointment, or reach us online for orders, custom quotes, and support.

Draft copy:

Have a question about an order, a custom piece, or visiting the workshop? Reach us directly — every order and quote is handled by the team that makes the furniture, not a call center.

- Email: [insert email]
- WhatsApp: [insert number]
- Showroom: [insert full address, Marrakech — confirm neighborhood, matching the About page]
- Hours: [insert hours, e.g. Monday–Friday by appointment]
- Response time: [insert real number, e.g. "within 1 business day"]

Trust/local signals to add (weak or missing across the four sites reviewed — easy differentiation):

- LocalBusiness schema markup with the real showroom address and hours
- "Book a visit" link/calendar rather than just an address, since La Marrakechoise itself requires an appointment
- A trade/design-professional contact path for interior designers and architects (none of the four furniture-focused sites reviewed showcase one clearly, unlike the brass-faucet niche where trade programs are standard)

- Expected response time and order-status routing ("For an existing order, include your order number")

GEO Checklist — Getting Cited by ChatGPT & Google AI Mode

- [ ] Direct-answer-first structure on every page (40-60 word answer before any brand story)
- [ ] Question-phrased H2/H3s matching how people ask AI ("Is travertine furniture durable?" not "Durability")
- [ ] FAQPage schema on every category, product, and blog page — 6-10 Q&As, 50-150 words each
- [ ] Product schema on every product page (material, price, dimensions, availability)
- [ ] Specific, checkable claims over vague ones ("hand-finished over 6-10 weeks by 4 artisans" not "crafted with passion and care")
- [ ] Named author bios with credentials on About and every blog post — missing across all four competitors reviewed
- [ ] Visible "last updated" dates on blog posts; refresh quarterly
- [ ] Server-side rendered text (no content hidden behind JavaScript) so AI crawlers can read it directly
- [ ] An `llms.txt` file at the site root with plain, marketing-free summaries of the collection and process
- [ ] Comparison pages ("travertine vs. marble," "Moroccan vs. Scandinavian design") — none of the four competitors have this yet
- [ ] Neutral, declarative sentences in answer/FAQ sections; keep brand-voice phrasing ("we believe," "we're passionate about") confined to story sections
- [ ] Encourage and syndicate real customer reviews to Houzz, Pinterest, Reddit design/home threads, and design-focused review sites — off-site mention volume correlates with AI citation rate
- [ ] Pursue genuine third-party mentions (an interior-design blog feature, a design-fair appearance, a press mention of the workshop) over volume link-building
- [ ] Monitor unlinked brand mentions and request a link where found

Technical SEO Checklist & Implementation Roadmap

Technical checklist:

- [ ] Register the domain and set up Google Search Console before publishing anything
- [ ] Unique title tag + meta description on every page from day one

- [ ] XML sitemap submitted, breadcrumb schema on all category/product pages
- [ ] Core Web Vitals check — large product photography will be the biggest weight; compress and lazy-load images
- [ ] Alt text on every product image using descriptive language ("handmade travertine console table with wood base," not "IMG_0142")
- [ ] HTTPS + mobile responsiveness confirmed from launch
- [ ] Internal linking pass once About/Blog/Sur-Mesure exist — every page links to and from at least 2 others

Roadmap:

Phase	Timeline	Deliverables
1 — Foundation	Weeks 1-2	Domain + brand name finalized, Home page live, meta titles/descriptions site-wide, Search Console setup
2 — Core pages	Weeks 2-4	Seating page, Tables & Consoles page, About page (real names/photos), Sur-Mesure page, Contact page
3 — Remaining categories	Weeks 4-6	Lighting, Mirrors, Decor category pages using the same template
4 — Blog launch	Weeks 4-12	Publish posts 1-10 at 1/week, FAQ schema on all new pages
5 — GEO hardening	Weeks 8-14	llms.txt, comparison pages, review syndication to Houzz/Pinterest/Reddit, outreach for 2-3 genuine design-press mentions
6 — Ongoing	Month 4+	2 blog posts/month, quarterly stat refresh, monthly manual check of AI citation appearances

How to measure success: Google Search Console impressions/rank for the keyword list above, plus a monthly manual check — ask ChatGPT and Google AI Mode the core questions ("best handmade Moroccan furniture brand," "is travertine furniture durable") and log whether the brand is named.